How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

Global REITs posted modest gains for the 12-month period ended August 31, 2025, with the benchmark index up 1.78%. The Fund trailed the index slightly amid mixed results across regions and property sectors." so that we can use 1 MDPF for all classes

Investor sentiment was tempered by shifting central bank policies, trade tensions linked to U.S. tariffs, and ongoing geopolitical uncertainty. At the same time, higher construction and materials costs curtailed new supply, giving landlords incremental pricing power. Real estate fundamentals generally improved, supporting steady—though modest—returns.

An overweight to Europe detracted from relative results, as European markets softened, while an underweight to Asia proved costly given strong performance in Japan and Hong Kong. A modest underweight in North America helped relative performance, as those markets lagged the index.

Stock selection in the United States contributed positively—particularly in data centers, senior housing, and outdoor advertising—though positions in cold storage and manufactured home communities were headwinds. In Asia, J-REIT holdings performed well, while in Europe, Pan-European cell tower stocks weighed on results.

Throughout the period, the Fund maintained its disciplined, bottom-up investment process, emphasizing management quality, balance-sheet strength, and sustainable growth in earnings.
