How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

During the period, the Easterly Small Cap Value Fund returned 13.97%, compared to a return of 8.91% for the Russell 2000 Value Index. This was a period full of market moving items including a US Presidential election, shifting monetary policy, an announced tariff framework, updated tax policy, and continued global geopolitical uncertainty. President Trump's "Liberation Day" announcement of reciprocal tariffs sent equity markets lower in April 2025, offering patient and tactical investors attractive entry points and enabling the Fund to enact portfolio changes with high conviction leading to positive results. With inflation easing and labor markets weakening, expectations for interest rate cuts in the second half of 2025 gained momentum. For small caps, which are more sensitive to financing conditions, this shift was beneficial. The yield curve steepened throughout the period, which has positive ramifications for small-cap value stocks. This remains a tailwind for both the Fund and the asset class as the Fed continues its rate-cutting cycle. With S&P 500 trading at 23x forward earnings and the largest 10 stocks trading at 30x earnings, there is a significant valuation dispersion between market capitalization ranges. Small caps with positive earnings represented by the S&P 600 trade at nearly a 35% discount on a P/E basis, compared to their large cap peers, a discount last seen in the late 1990s. The top 10% of US stocks now reflect 78% of total market cap for the US stock market, a record high. The top-heavy concentration is partly a function of the ongoing AI frenzy, where the perceived beneficiaries of AI are rewarded through elevated valuation multiples. With the market's top-heavy concentration and elevated valuation levels, we feel the equities that should see the highest returns are those with improving fundamentals and low valuations, as investors become more discerning over the earnings multiples they are paying. Our portfolio is populated with attractively valued stocks, each with fundamental catalysts that should expand earnings multiples over time.
