How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

During the period, the Easterly Snow Small Cap Value Fund had a total return of 27.34%, compared to a return of 24.54% for the Bloomberg US 2000 Value Index and 29.95% for the Russell 2000 Value Index. Major indexes posted solid gains for the period as robust corporate earnings and steady economic growth provided a resilient backdrop for equities, despite ongoing geopolitical uncertainty. The S&P 500 set new all-time highs in August 2026 and trades at 19.4x forward earnings, continuing to hover above its 30-year average of 17.2x. Market valuations remain supported by heavy index concentration, with the largest 10 companies representing 39.3% of the S&P 500 and trading for 20x forward earnings. Artificial intelligence (AI) remains a dominant investment theme, though we believe the next phase of opportunity will be driven less by the companies leading the AI buildout and more by the businesses supplying it. We have started to see a broadening out of returns, which we expect to be a tailwind for the Fund and the asset class.

Markets are adjusting to a higher-for-longer policy trajectory, as the Federal Reserve weighs economic resilience alongside persistent inflationary pressures, driven in part by the ongoing conflict in the Middle East. Higher interest rates historically pressure small cap stocks which can be more sensitive to financing conditions. In our view, this environment may encourage greater valuation discipline and create opportunities for investors focused on fundamentally attractive businesses trading at discounted prices. As recent market leadership broadens and capital rotates toward more attractively valued companies, we believe businesses with strong balance sheets, healthy free cash flow generation, and company-specific catalysts are well positioned.
